DLCA EDITORIAL

The recent increase in gas prices across the U.S. Virgin Islands is being felt by everyone. Families, commuters, taxi operators, small businesses, delivery drivers, and seniors are all having to make difficult choices as fuel prices continue to affect the cost of daily life.

The DLCA's most recent fuel survey for the week of May 4, 2026, shows just how significant the increase has become. Average self-service regular gasoline was $4.62 per gallon on St. Croix, $5.17 on St. Thomas, and $5.48 on St. John. Diesel prices were even higher, averaging $5.45 on St. Croix, $6.69 on St. Thomas, and $6.55 on St. John.

These increases are tied to a combination of global and local factors. The war and continuing instability overseas have disrupted fuel markets, affected shipping routes, increased transportation costs, and created uncertainty in the price of oil. For island communities like ours, those global pressures reach us quickly because nearly all of our fuel must be imported by sea.

Here in the U.S. Virgin Islands, we also face costs that many mainland communities do not. Fuel must be shipped, offloaded, stored, transported, and then sold through a much smaller market. That means changes in global fuel prices can hit us harder and sometimes take longer to ease.

The DLCA does not set gas prices. However, we do monitor prices, publish fuel surveys, review market conditions, and investigate complaints when consumers believe there may be unfair or deceptive practices. We are also supporting the ongoing work of Analysis Group, which is conducting a deeper review of fuel pricing in the Territory to better understand what is driving these costs and what policy options may be available.

For consumers, these are difficult times, but small steps can help. Compare prices before filling up, combine errands, avoid unnecessary trips, keep your vehicle properly maintained, check tire pressure, carpool where possible, and report suspected price gouging to the DLCA.

We understand the burden these prices place on residents. The DLCA will continue to provide information, promote transparency, and protect consumers as we work through these challenging economic conditions together.
